"The same rule holds that mud adhering to a ball does not make it unfit for play, but modern ex-perience on American courses prove that in certain weather conditions mud does make a ball unfit for play, and the Western Golf association recently promulgated a gen-eral rule that a ball may be cleaned on a putting green when muddy. It also has been a local practice for many years to protect turf, that a ball may be played off any green extraneous to the one the golfer is playing, so that all golfers feel that it is a regular rule. There is no such rule, except course regula-tions, until the Western Golf asociation recently made one. "There are many other points that might well be taken up from time to time, if an American body could establish laws of the game without awaiting assent from men in foreign lands, although it is un-likely that the primary tenets of the sport would be altered; for it would not be golf were the rules

When time was up, Sandy in desperation dropped another ball down his trouser leg and exclaimed. Here it is! Whereupon the timekeeper sprang up angrily and shouted. You're a liar. I've been sitting on your ball all the time."
